For our user story diagrams, the red arrow indicates the critical path that was completed during our sprint. Most of our user stories had linear paths which did not depend on multiple sub-tasks and implementing these user stories were fairly simple. However the non-linear paths had more dependencies, which made implementation of these tasks more difficult. Unfortunately, most of the group had a heavy workload this sprint and the velocity of this sprint remained the same as other sprints. Regardless, we managed to complete and debug our tasks.
